World Bank to Issue SDR Bonds in China

The PBOC had allowed a division of the World Bank to issue bonds denominated in special drawing rights (SDR) in China's interbank bond market, with issuance size of 2 billion SDRs (USD 2.8 billion). Chinese yuan will be the settlement currency. Interbank debt denominated in SDRs will diversify investment portfolios both in China and abroad. Industrial and Commercial Bank of China (ICBC) will be the lead underwriter for the issue.

China Set R&D Targets for 2020

The State Council plan, published on 8 August, lists targets for science and technology from 2016 to 2020 as well as government action to help realize the targets. Priorities for the government over the next five years include directing resources to strategic areas, fostering creativity, creating a favorable policy environment and removing barriers to innovation. China will spend more resources in research areas key to its national strength and security.
